"KOREAN INDEPENDENCE PARADE" ✓

On April 16, 1919, after the Korean Independence League held a three day Congress at the Little Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., they proceeded to Independence Hall, where the Independence of the United States was declared, to proclaim the Independence of Korea.

The delegates formed in a body in parade formation and were headed by mounted reserves and a band followed by both American and Korean flags and a banner inscribed "Korean Independence League" and a large Korean flag, held by members of the League. Then came the entire members, about 150 people, each man and woman carrying both American and Korean flags. They assembled in front of Independence Hall previous to going in to read the Declaration of Independence of Korea.
